Course information
Exchange students

The following tips should support you in how to find information about courses you are planning to take during your exchange period with the University of Stuttgart.

Erasmus+ students: Please contact your Erasmus+ coordinator first. S/he will be able to provide you with detailed information about your courses.

Overseas students: Please read the following information carefully. In case of doubts, please contact the IO. For detailed questions, we will organize academic counseling for you after your arrival.

General information

Study programs
We have a filterable list of our study programs here: https://www.uni-stuttgart.de/en/study/study-programs/program/. In general all study programs are available to exchange students but please consider two important things:

- Some programs only have courses in German and many have a very limited selection of English courses. Please take this into consideration!
- If you want to take courses of an international Master's program here (no matter if you are an under graduate or graduate student, please notify us first as we will need to ask the program directors for permission – this applies to overseas students only. Select "Master" in the drop down menu "Degree" and select "English" in the drop down menu "Language".

Faculty websites
- A list of our faculties and the institutes that belong to them can be found here: https://www.uni-stuttgart.de/en/university/faculties-institutes/.
- If you are looking for general information of a study program the general faculty website is the best place to search. The institute sites will however often include information to specific courses. You can find the institute responsible for a specific course on C@MPUS or in our module handbooks (Modulhandbücher).

How to receive course information

C@MPUS
All courses offered at the University of Stuttgart are listed on the online platform C@MPUS. The portal provides you with course descriptions including ECTS points, language of instruction and course schedule: https://campus.uni-stuttgart.de/cusonline/webnav.ini. If necessary, the language can be changed to English in the top right corner. There are two easy ways to check when courses are offered:

- Choose the faculty on the left side, and then on this page under Teaching and Research (Forschung & Lehre) click on "Course Offer" or "Courses". You will then see the entire list of courses offered from this faculty. The year can be changed in the top right corner of this page. It is also possible to expand the faculty and select specific institutes to see their courses.
- Next to the Log-in button, there is a menu to open a search page. Select "Lehrveranstaltungen" from the list and then you will be able to search for a specific course.

Please note
The final course catalogue with schedule and locations will be published in February/March for the following summer semester and in August/September for the following winter semester. Therefore, if you are looking for information about courses in summer semester, for example, it is possible to find much of the same information by searching for courses in the previous summer semester. You can also limit searches to English only courses (language of instruction/Vortragssprache).

Module handbooks

Every one of our degree programs has a module handbook (Modulhandbuch) where the courses that are related to the program are listed. In general these are intended for degree seeking students but the information about the courses contained within is useful for anyone who wants to study here.

Current module handbooks can be found here: http://www.uni-stuttgart.de/bologna/modulhandbuecher/ and in the C@MPUS system. On the page that loads you can look at a few different things for each degree program (module handbook, study program progression plan, exam regulations). For exchange students, only the module handbooks are really useful as the other things relate only to full time students.

Sometimes you will see multiple module handbooks listed for a study program. It is just best to select the module handbook for the most recent year. The year only relates to the definition of the study program and not the year that the module handbook was last updated. Module handbooks are updated every semester.

How to register for classes

You have to register for your classes within the C@MPUS portal. To find the registration procedure, please click on the lecture you would like to attend. A separate window will open with information on the ECTS credits, the professor, the dates and registration and requirements.
